Two Men at Outs Over a Debt.
A lively civil suit was tried in Justice Winchester's court this morning.

The action was between Chas. Frederick, the sewing machine agent, and Dan J. Bailey. The plaintiff alleged that Bailey owed him a balance on a sewing machine. Justice Winchester decided the case in favor of the plaintiff and when Bailey left he made some indignant remark which was not clearly understood by the court. Soon afterward Mr. Frederick returned and informed the magistrate Bailey's remark was a threat and to the effect that he and Frederick could not live in the same town.
